

Supply chain law FAQs

1. What is the aim of the law?

- The aim of the law is to improve the protection of human rights.
- Companies in Germany also have a responsibility to help protect human rights. They must ensure that human rights are respected in their supply chains, which means no child labour or enforced labour.
- This is a question of respecting basic human rights. It is not about implementing German social standards everywhere in the world.
- Environmental issues also play a part if – because of them – human rights are violated (e.g. in the case of polluted water).
- The law sets out clear and realisable requirements for corporate due diligence, thus creating legal certainty for companies and affected persons.
- In passing this law we are fulfilling a pledge made in the Coalition Agreement.

2. Why do we need a due diligence law?

- For many years, the German government had relied on voluntary commitments in order to implement the UN Guiding Principles on Business and Human Rights in Germany, and had adopted a National Action Plan for Business and Human Rights.
- In order to check whether bigger companies were meeting their human rights due diligence obligations in their supply chains, a monitoring system was set up using independent service providers.
- The compliance target of 50 per cent was clearly not being met under this system:
 - In the first company survey (in 2019), about 400 of the roughly 3,000 companies invited to take part completed the questionnaire; about 20% of them were shown to be compliant.
 - For the second round (in 2020), the methodology was improved and about 450 (from a total of 2,250) companies responded; 17% were compliant.
- The Coalition Agreement envisaged for this situation the enactment of national legislation by the German government.

3. What are the biggest human rights violations worldwide in connection with economic activities?

- There are 152 million child labourers, half of whom are being exploited.
- There are 25 million people working as forced labourers.

4. Which human rights are covered by the due diligence obligations?

- Bodily integrity and health;
- Freedom from slavery and forced labour;
- Protection of children and freedom from child labour;
- Freedom of association and the right to collective bargaining;
- Protection against torture;
- Fair working conditions (safety at work, breaks);
- Environmentally related obligations to protect human health.

5. Which companies come under the law?

- From 2023 onwards: companies with more than 3,000 employees (over 600 companies in Germany).
- From 2024 onwards: companies with more than 1,000 employees (2,900 companies).
- After that, the area of application will be evaluated.

6. What are the most important rules and regulations?

1. For the first time ever, clear requirements for corporate due diligence obligations

- This creates legal certainty for companies and affected persons.

2. Responsibility for the entire supply chain

- Corporate due diligence obligations apply to the entire supply chain – from the raw materials to the completed sales product.
- The requirements that companies must meet are appropriate and tiered, for example based on the degree of influence the company has on those committing the violation and also based on the different stages within the supply chain.
- Many companies are already meeting these requirements, since they are already implementing, for example, the EU Conflict Minerals Regulation and/or the EU CSR Directive.

3. External monitoring by a government authority

- The Federal Office for Economic Affairs and Export Control, which is tasked with monitoring compliance with the law, is an established government authority.
- It checks company reports and investigates any grievances.

4. Better protection of human rights

- Not only can people whose human rights have been violated use the German courts to get their rights upheld, they can now also report their grievances to the Federal Office for Economic Affairs and Export Control.

7. What is a supply chain?

- For the purposes of this law, the supply chain covers all the inputs that the company uses in order to manufacture a product or provide a service, from the acquisition of the raw materials to delivering it to the end customers.

8. How are the requirements tiered within the supply chain?

- The requirements that companies must meet are tiered based on the different stages within the supply chain:
 - the company's own business operations,
 - direct suppliers,
 - indirect suppliers.

And based on:

- the kind and extent of the business activity,
- the degree of influence the company has on the one directly committing the violation,
- the typically expected severity of the violation.

9. What must a company do in the context of its own business operations and in the context of a direct supplier's business operations?

- Companies must implement the following measures:
 - Draft and adopt a policy statement on respecting human rights.
 - Carry out a risk analysis: by implementing procedures for identifying disadvantageous impacts on human rights.
 - Engage in risk management (incl. remedial measures) to prevent potential negative impacts on human rights.
 - Establish a grievance mechanism.
 - Implement transparent public reporting.

Supply chain law FAQs

- In the event of a violation of rights, a company must immediately take steps to remedy the situation in its own area of business, steps that will necessarily cause the violation to cease. In addition to that, it must also introduce further prevention measures.
- If the company is not able to end the violation in the case of a direct supplier in the foreseeable future, then it must draw up a concrete plan to minimise and avoid the problem.

10. What must a company do in the case of an indirect supplier?

- In this case the due diligence obligations apply only as warranted by the circumstances.
- If the company learns about a possible violation by an indirect supplier, then it must immediately:
 - conduct a risk analysis,
 - implement a strategy to minimise and avoid the problem,
 - firmly establish appropriate prevention measures vis-à-vis the one committing the violation.

11. What must a company do when a grievance is reported?

- The company must examine whether rights have been violated in the context of its own business operations or in the context of a supplier's business operations.
- Depending on what stage of the supply chain is affected, the requirements set out above then apply.

12. Must business relations be terminated in certain circumstances?

- That is not the aim of the law. Instead the aim is to lastingly establish improved protection of human rights.
- The only time that business relations need to be terminated is when a serious violation of human rights has been found and the measures from the company's strategy that have been taken so far have failed to succeed within a set period of time.

13. Are companies liable for human rights violations in their supply chains?

- The law does not create any new liability regulations under civil law.
- Liability under civil law according to German and foreign laws continues to apply.

Supply chain law FAQs

14. Can non-governmental organisations file law suits?

- Non-governmental organisations do not themselves have any right of action.
- However, affected persons who have had important rights violated can be supported by non-governmental organisations in filing a suit (so-called representative action).

15. Are there standards for minimum wages?

- The law does not lay down any global minimum wages.
- It does however make reference to the ILO conventions, which envisage decent wages.
- The desirable wage levels vary from country to country and are guided by the respective economic situation.

16. How is the law to be implemented?

- The Federal Office for Economic Affairs and Export Control will ensure the effective implementation of the law.
- Infringements of the law may result in fines.
- Companies found to have committed serious infringements may be excluded from public procurement processes for up to three years.
- At the same time, the German government will offer substantial support programmes for companies.

17. Is there an electronic reporting procedure?

- The authority responsible for monitoring compliance is working with a fully electronic reporting format which is simple to use. Existing reporting obligations (e.g. CSR reporting) will be integrated into this format so as to avoid creating parallel structures.
- Further simplifications for companies: The authority will set up a “recognition mechanism” for existing certification systems. This will give companies guidance as to where and when existing certificates can be used as proof of due diligence.

18. Don't we need Europe-wide rules?

- The goal continues to be a uniform European set of rules.
- It will probably take several years until we have a uniform European set of rules.

Supply chain law FAQs

- With a national law, we will be able to influence EU legislation in the direction that we want. That is also in the interests of German businesses.

19. What is the time plan going forward?

- The intention is that the Federal Cabinet will decide on the draft law by mid-March at the latest.
- After that, it is intended that the law will be adopted by the German Bundestag (Parliament) before the summer recess.
- For companies with more than 3,000 employees, it will then come into force starting on 1 January 2023.
